

I'm Dave Dickinson and I have worked in education for over 36 years as a teacher, educational psychologist, senior executive and government adviser. I have a strong commitment to improving the learning and life outcomes of children and young people, working with schools to help them to improve and refine approaches to teaching and learning. Away from work I have a wide range of active interests; cycling, running and hill walking that keep me fit. I have my own grown-up children and now grandchildren to keep me on my toes!
